

About Fanos Xefonos

Fanos Xenofos is an experienced voice coach and actor. He originally studied Aerospace Engineering at Kingston University. Before making his transition into acting and coaching he worked in aviation for Britannia Airways, EasyJet and Thomsonfly as a duty officer in ground operations and overseas departure supervisor.

As a coach his aim is to develop participants' communication skills to a high level of excellence. His extensive experience includes working as a role-play actor in business schools and commercial organisations. He has appeared at The Globe, London West End and has had the privilege to tour the Middle East. He was a member of a writers' group with the Royal Court Theatre for several years.

Fanos is currently studying for his Master's degree in Voice at Central School of Speech and Drama, University of London, whilst directing his first comedy play.
